- We will support the patient as well as the family emotionally and spiritually providing resources to them as they face serious illness, caregiving, end-of-life, and grief.
- We will care for patients wherever they call home –whether in their own home, a caregiver's home, a long term care facility or an assisted living community
- We will mobilize the people of your faith community as trained volunteers to engage, support, and aid those that experience terminal illness or end-of-life issues.
- We will educate on end-on-life issues, coping with terminal illnesses, and address options of care for caregivers to consider.

Plan for Risks Before You Act

Every successful business has to take risks to be successful. Smart planning and execution can mitigate many risks.

Be Diligent

Being in business is a long-term venture. Being industrious, hard working, and having perseverance in business will pay in the long run. Other organizations and people in authority will seek out diligent and capable business partners.

Hard Work Brings Increase

God blesses businesses that base their work ethic on initiative and honest, hard work. On the other hand, ill-gotten wealth will not be permanent.

Do Not Cheat The Customer

This may seem like common sense, but for some businesses their motto is "do not get caught cheating the customer".

Provide Quality Goods and Services

All businesses should be in a position where they know their product or service is good. The only way to do this is through a lot of hard work and a focus on quality.

Foster Good Trading Relationships

One of the reasons King Solomon was so successful was he fostered good trading relationships. King Solomon's wisdom in the area of trade and commerce enabled everyone to profit and show increase.

Be Honest in All Business Dealings

Honesty in business means no false advertising. It means selling products and services that provide value to the customer. A business should never knowingly sell inferior goods or services that may harm the customer. A business should be open in all of its business dealings so as to not even give the perception of dishonesty.
